

A government that is limited in its power over people by a constitution and laws protecting individual rights.

A government in which there are no limits to a government's powers.